For internal and external information

The vast majority of our products (principal exception – cable reel) do not fall under the RoHS directives 2002/95/EU, 2011/65/EU and 2015/863/EU (since they are not electrical and electronic equipment). If a customer would build them into electrical and electronic equipment, they would still be compliant (we have started to replace alloys containing lead with lead free alternatives, but most of our metallic components still do contain lead), according to Annex III 6a), 6b) and/or 6c). Of course, future product will be developed to meet the requirements according of this and future regulations.

Best Regards
